It's pretty simple: Sun City doesn't have any dog parks

I was out back, enjoying a Michelob Ultra and grilling a tri-tip on a beautiful early October evening when the ruckus began.

From the greenbelt below me came a few not-so-well chosen F-bombs as two men screamed at each other so loudly I was sure they were going to come to blows.

"Get your dog off of him," one yelled. "He needs to be on a leash!"

I went to the fence to make sure no one was going to get hurt and saw a man with his dog _ on a leash _ hustling down the greenbelt toward the street like he was in a hurry to get away. With good reason because the other dog was not on a leash and didn't have good intentions.

"Go ahead and call the police," his owner yelled. "I don't care."

didn't call the police but did maybe the next best thing. As he left he took a picture of the other man's white pickup truck, making sure he got the license plate in the frame. Ironically, right next to the pickup truck was a sign saying dogs must be on a leash on the greenbelt.

They were two dog owners, who I'm sure both love their pets. But the similarities ended there.

One respected others by keeping his dog on a leash. The other simply didn't care.

To him, the greenbelt wasn't just a place to walk his dog or take a stroll himself. It was his own private dog park, where he seemed unconcerned with allowing his dog to roam free doing whatever it wanted, no matter the inconvenience to other dogs _ and other people.

That not only interferes with people and dogs who play by the rules, but people just walking by. My greenbelt in particular gets a lot of walkers, and they have no idea when a dog runs up to them off a leash whether it is coming to be petted or to possibly take a piece of their calf.

He's also putting his own dog at risk. Coyotes are a common sight on my greenbelt and they can get to your unleashed dog a lot quicker than you might think. I've watched as people frantically try to get their dogs on leashes after spotting coyotes, and I've seen coyotes track other dogs.

Of course, at least 75 percent of all dogs in Sun City are white, furry and small, which puts them at the top of the coyote food chart.

Anyway, no blood was shed that night, and I was eventually able to enjoy both my beer and the tri tip. But I have no doubt the same scenario will play out again, if not next week then next month.

It's pretty simple folks. Sun City has no dog parks.

Keep your dog on a leash.

I love having Sherm Frederick's column in SCS LIFE, especially when he starts writing about the things we used to do in the good old

Board of directors awards Sun City Executive Director new three-year contract

By Tim Dahlberg
SCS LIFE

Sun City Executive Director Mitzi Mills has been given a new three-year contract by the Board of Directors, which was effusive in praising her ability to lead the community.

Mills, who has been executive director for eight years, will make $254,792 in the first year of the contract after being given a 2.9 percent wage increase by the board. Her pay will also be boosted a maximum of 3 percent in each of the final two years of her contract.

Board members dismissed complaints about Mills _ and her pay _ from a group of residents that attended the Sept. 30 meeting, saying she has demonstrated great leadership in her role as the top employee of Sun City Summerlin Community Association Inc.

Board member Dick Clark said

there has been a remarkable change in leadership under Mills, who he credited with making Sun City's financial process more professional and for running an efficient organization. He noted that there had been a number of executive directors before her who didn't last long in their jobs.

"If I had to use one word to describe what changed when Mitzi came here it was professionalism," Clark said. "What we had before her was not a professionally run entity. And I'm very pleased that she's still here."

The issue of Mills' pay drew a bigger crowd than usual to the board meeting, and there were cheers for the few who spoke in opposition to paying her an increased salary.

Mills was asked to detail her background for those unfamiliar with her, and told of working her way up the management ladder in Arizona while adding more professional certifications for running large organizations. She said she was excited about where Sun City is today and where it will be over the next few years.

Still, former board member Steve Commander complained about her salary, saying it was more than 50 governors around the country make while overseeing millions of people while Sun City only has 12,000 residents.

That didn't fly with the board, which voted 9-0 for the new contract.

"Mitzi has the position equivalent to a CEO of a multi-million dollar corporation. We are a multi-million dollar corporation," Ellen Bachman said. "Her position is also equivalent to a city manager, because we are almost a quasi-municipality, so she has dual roles that she has to fulfill. And for her compensation it is well within reason for somebody having to have those dual roles, or even simply as a CEO of a multi-million dollar corporation. If anything, it's low."

Bachman said that while nobody is perfect, Mills has done "an absolutely incredible job in bringing the community together, and keeping the community together, and being innovative, and at the same time guarding our assets very well."

Under terms of the contract, Mills will get a raise in the second and third years of her contract of 3 percent or the Consumer Price Index for the year, whichever is lower.

Board member Erik Braun expressed some exasperation about people complaining about Mills and her salary, saying that four board seats will be up for election in January and that election chair and former board member Leo Crawford "will be happy to talk to you and help you fill out an application for candidate consideration."

After nearly a year since approval, license plate cameras still missing

SCS LIFE

It's been nearly a year, but Sun City may soon have a system of cameras that identify vehicles going in and out of the community.

Six of the planned 12 cameras were installed shortly after a contract was signed with Flock Safety last December. But the remainder have been in limbo ever since, and Sun City officials during the summer complained the company was not returning calls asking why.

SCSCAI Executive Director Mitzi Mills put most of the blame for the delay on the City of Las Vegas, which must issue permits for the cameras. She said those issues have been resolved and that the installation of the remaining cameras "will begin sometime mid-October 2025."

"The installation of the Flock Cameras has been a much longer process than anyone anticipated," Mills said in an email to SCS LIFE.

Sun City entered into a contract with Flock last December, agreeing to pay $37,800 to pay for the cameras and another $30,000 a year to monitor them. But, after cameras were installed quickly at the three main Sun City entrances, work on the project ground to a halt.

That effectively meant the cameras couldn't be used to spot cars that might be stolen or used in crimes if potential wrongdoers were alert enough to use other entrances to the community.

There are six entrances to the big-days.

He's at it again in this issue, writing about how the two of us as young cub reporters for an editor who was quite the player in town in the 1970's. Don Digilio had a powerful role as editor of the Review Journal and may not have done everything according to the book but he always did right by his employees.

He also taught Sherm a lesson in management skills, which came in handy after Sherm became the publisher of the paper.

It was 1978 and I was the political writer for the RJ trying to figure out how to get to Elko to cover the Democratic Party state convention. I couldn't fly there because it would cost the paper too much money, and I sure wasn't going to take my Camaro on a 1,000-mile round trip through the middle of the desert to do the story.

Then the Democratic Party offered me a ride on a bus full of delegates. I could even bring my wife, who was pregnant with our first son.

The trip took close to 12 hours, with about 100 miles of it on a dirt road that was a shortcut to the northeast Nevada town. My wife swears she thought she was going to have the baby bouncing on that road, but we made it to Elko eventually, got a motel room, and covered the convention.

When it came time to go, as we stood with suitcases on the main road outside the motel, the bus carrying the delegates didn't even slow down as it passed by at 50 mph.

This, of course, was before cell phones and convenient ways to reach people. It took the rest of the day to find a ride with the Teamsters Union bus that was leaving the next morning. Fortunately, they stopped for us for a ride home that involved a lot of drinking on their part.

Sherm had been promoted to assistant city editor by then and was technically my boss. So when I got back and told him I was taking a week off in comp time for the long trip he told me that the 24 hours or so spent on the bus was my own personal time and couldn't be charged to the company.

That kind of attitude went a long way at the RJ, where owner Don Reynolds was so famous for pinching a penny that he once fired a sports writer because he had too nice of a car in the parking lot. But it didn't fly with Digilio, who told me to not only take a week's comp time but another week off, too, for good measure.

Nearly a half century later, Sherm still insists he was right.

Some of you may recall me writing on this page about my neighbor Sam, who died suddenly. I wondered at the time what would become of his home and the golf cart that his late wife had bought him with her gambling winnings.

Well, Sam's son came with a few others and spent a week cleaning out the home before putting it up for sale. They gave the golf cart to his lady friend, who said she had always wanted one.

And now I have new neighbors, who moved in last week excited to start a new chapter in their lives.

The cycle of life comes full circle once again.

Cameras

gest part of Sun City north of Lake Mead Blvd, and four to the portion of the community south of Lake Mead.

The cameras are designed to read license plates and gather other information that identify vehicles at various entrances to Sun City. That information would be used on active police calls or when trying to find a car tied to a crime that traveled through SCS.

Mills pushed the idea of the cameras, which will be linked directly to the Metro Police command center with no one other than police authorized to view them. Mills envisioned them as an alternative to a gated community that could help catch some thieves or others who are in SCS and might be wanted on charges somewhere.

There are Flock cameras at the intersection of Rampart and Lake Mead Boulevard, and efforts are underway to put some at the 215 Beltway Lake Mead interchange.

Police say the cameras are a valuable tool for solving crimes, giving them the ability to identify suspicious vehicles after, say, a burglary in a Sun City neighborhood.

But privacy advocates have warned against the use of the cameras, and several cities that had them installed initially have had them taken down. That included Evanston, Illinois, which took down 19 cameras after Illinois officials discovered Flock had allowed U.S. Customs and Border Protection to access the cameras against state law.

Strike up the band: Call goes out for SCS performers

Two SCS entertainment fixtures are striking the right chord for the music scene by putting out the call for folks who'd like to connect, jam a little, and maybe spark something bigger.

Carol Reed (the engine behind the Music in the Park concerts) and Yukon Jack Lohman (master of the acoustic guitar and folksy stories) want to foster opportunities for other singers and instrumentalists.

"Sun City Summerlin is a place to live your dreams," says Reed, who works mightily to share her love of outdoor concerts. "Plus, music is good for your soul, whether you're playing it or listening."

The idea is simple: make introductions, and see if the right mix comes along. From there, small groups can form and strengthen the community's musical heartbeat. Residency in Sun City Summerlin is a plus, not a must.

"What matters most," Reed says, "is bringing together great people who want to play, have fun, and celebrate this special time in our lives."

Those interested can come out to a meet-and-greet at Miller's Tavern on Oct. 22 from 3-5 p.m. NO INSTRUMENTS this time, please — just bring your curiosity and musical story.

For more info, contact Jack Lohman at jglohman@gmail.com or Carol Reed at carolreed40@gmail.com.

SPIRITED PERFORMANCE: Michael Grimm promises treats and tricks for his Halloween-themed "Night of Souls" party and concert, Oct. 25 at the Desert Vista Ballroom.

Grimm, a longtime Las Vegas performer and "America's Got Talent" winner, says the fun will start "before the stage lights even come on," with costume contests, a photo booth, and a chance to learn the "Thriller" dance.

Showroom fixture Kelly Clinton-Holmes will emcee, with Grimm's band already rehearsing its renditions of "Witchy Woman" and "I Put a Spell On You."

"Night of Souls" is adapted from a show Grimm will perform at Myron's at the Smith Center, but without the haunting experience of navigating downtown Las Vegas at night.

96 CHEERS: Mary Lee, who has tried and enjoyed almost every SCS club and activity, celebrates her 96th birthday and takes the stage in "Guys & Dolls" this month. She is back on her feet after a quick recovery from the fall we wrote about in August, spending evenings rehearsing for the 6 p.m. on Oct. 18 and 2 p.m. Oct. 19 performances at The Summit. Tickets are going fast. Next up for the SCS Community Theatre Club is "California Suite" in February; auditions on Nov. 11 and 12 and details at scs-theatre.com.

A PIZZA NEWS: Marvin Caloreira, director of food and beverage for the Sun City Summerlin Community Association, says residents are fired up about the new pizza oven at The Summit Restaurant. He also reports the remodeled Tavern at the Falls and its "more luxury look" are on track to debut in the next few weeks.

Las Vegas writer and model Doug Puppel contributed five stories to Engineering News-Record since his last Neon Diary column.

COMMENTARY

The first editor of our young careers

I hesitate to tell this story for fear of giving away one of the trade secrets of newspapers. I'm afraid I'll burst the bubble of readers who attach significance to whatever is written and published on ink and paper by believing the popular mystique that newspaper editorials must have been thought through and debated by a room full of intellectuals the likes of Dick Cavett and William F. Buckley Jr.

Here's what happened when Tim Dahlberg and I were young pups in the Las Vegas Review-Journal newsroom.

Our editor at the time was Don Digilio, a vintage Vegas newsman. Starting at the R-J in the 1950s, he became editor in 1969. He married a show-girl, loved to gamble, and knew anybody worth knowing in Las Vegas at the time, including Frank Sinatra, the Rat Pack, Howard Hughes, a handful of mobsters, as well as the legendary Las Vegas Kick-Ass sheriff, Ralph Lamb.

Don has an oral history on file at the UNLV library. Not sure how enlightening it is, but trust me, someone ought to do a movie on Don. Ben Bradley may have been the quintessential newsman of Washington, D.C., in his time, but Don Digilio was also a man of his time and, oh baby, what a time it was in Las Vegas in the 60s and 70s.

Digilio stories are legion. This one will tell you something about the man most don't know.

He once gave me two tickets for

SHERMAN R. FREDERICK
COMMENTARY

Christians and Jews.

I asked Don if he wanted me to cover it, and he said, "no you're a young kid and we don't pay you much. It's a free dinner. Take it."

So we went. I showed up in the only jacket I owned — a brown corduroy one with elbow patches. It was a glitzy, old Vegas black tie affair. We didn't belong, and that became abundantly clear when we sat at one of several round tables in the back. As the room filled up, not one Christian or Jew or mobster sat with us. It felt awkward..

Meanwhile, Don and his wife were seated at the reserved table of honor. When he saw us way back in the back, he and his wife stood up, they grabbed their plates and drinks, and walked through the entire room to sit at our lonely table in the back.

Everybody watched him do it. I've never forgotten that courtesy.

Anyway, Tim and I arrived on the R-J scene in the mid-70s. We were in our 20s, he fresh out of UNR, and I was on a senior-year internship from the Harvard of the West — Northern Arizona University.

On Friday afternoons, when Don had two editorials due by a 4 p.m. deadline, he'd pass one off to someone on staff. Tim and I both had the honor several times.

Here's how it went: He'd hand my wife and me to attend a dinner honoring mobster Moe Dalitz. He was being recognized — and I'm not making this up — as the Las Vegas "Man of the Year" for the National Conference of us a newspaper clip and tell us to write an editorial on the topic.

We'd always ask, "Which side do you want to come down on?"

And he'd answer with an elfish smile: "Recap the issue, then conclude: Something must be done."

It was editorial baby-splitting at its finest, and from then on, Tim and I have both joked about the all too frequent "something must be done" newspaper editorial.

I probably shouldn't be telling these stories. But, as Walter Cronkite used to say, "That's the way it was." And that's the way Don Digilio was.

If anyone has something to say against Don Digilio, they'll have to go through me and Tim first.

He was our first editor.

ONE MORE THING

Sometimes I just have to turn off the news and put on a serial killer documentary so I can relax.

The Diamond Girls softball team (left) huddles together before a late-September game against the Red Hawks (right). The all-women's team is playing in its inaugural season in Sun City and faring quite well in the male-dominated league.

Diamond Girls breaking barriers and winning games in SCS softball

By Jenny Scheid
SCS LIFE

Down 10 runs going into the final inning at the newly upgraded Pinnacle Field, the Diamond Girls remained relentlessly upbeat.

"We've got this," a team member yelled out from the dugout. "We've scored more runs in an inning," another player said reassuringly.

This would not be that inning, with the game ending in a 21-11 loss to Al Youmans' Red Hawks for Sun City Summerlin's new all-women softball team. It was a rare defeat for the Diamond Girls, who had beaten the Red Hawks the three previous times they met and were not intimidated by playing against the men.

Indeed, what stands out in the first season for the Diamond Girls is how normal it all seems. The talk among those hanging along the fences to watch wasn't whether the Diamond Girls could compete but whether they would win the league title.

It was only two years ago that the Sun City Men's Softball League had to change its name because two women showed up to play. Now, on this day, they were equals on the field for the National League game, one of about 60 they will play in a season that will last until May.

This is the first season for the Diamond Girls in the Sun City Summerlin Softball Cub, which is broken up into three leagues and 12 teams: American for the most advanced players, Central in the middle and National for lower entry-level players winding down — and now the women.

So far it's been a big success on the field. Just 10 games into the season, the Diamond Girls were 7-2-1 and in first place in the National League by one game.

While the all-female team is new to the club, Sun City Summerlin women have been playing softball on Saturday mornings for more than 20 years, according to Lena Ramirez, who moved to Sun City Summerlin two years ago.

"I was visiting the gym, and there was a poster on the billboard for the ladies that get together on Saturday mornings and just play softball for fun," the 61-year-old said. "I saw the posting, and I thought, 'Hey, that sounds like fun.'"

"It had been 30 years since I played on a real team," said Ramirez, who played varsity softball in high school and joined a co-ed league in California for a couple of seasons. "But it was funny because I came out and it's like riding a bike. It just comes back to you."

At the Saturday morning sessions, a couple of the women's husbands would come to help pitch and field balls. Soon they were encouraging the women to join the softball club and play with the men. The women were told, "You're good enough to play with us."

"About seven women decided to do that. I was one of them," Ramirez said. "And then after this past season, one of the husbands said, 'Hey. You guys should have your own team.'"

Ramirez now manages the team, and her husband, Esau, who plays in the American League, helps coach.

Debbie Giovanetti was also one of the seven women who played with the men and then joined the Diamond Girls when it was formed this year. The 68-year-old played softball when she was in her 20s in New Jersey and then turned to soccer.

Giovanetti and her husband, Dominic, retired from teaching special education in New Jersey after 25 years and moved to Las Vegas. After getting a home in Sun City Summerlin, they were looking for fun things to do in a community that has dozens of different activities.

Saturday softball was a good place to start.

"I started playing, loving it, meeting all the girls, and then, all of a sudden, they were asking, "Do you want to play with the guys?" she said. "I gave it a try, and it's been so much fun."

Now, both Debbie and her husband play, and Dominic helps coach the Diamond Girls when he's not busy as president of the league.

"It does keep us in shape," Debbie Giovanetti said. "It keeps your mind going, and it's a social thing."

"I'll tell you what, we've made such good friends," she said. "Like every one of these women, we hang out after ball games. We just do things. We have gatherings and barbecues. We just all hang together."

At the top of the lineup for the Diamond Girls is Meg Walsh, a 64-year-old with some power. She hit a home run on her first at bat against the Red Hawks on Oct. 1, though it would not prove enough to make a difference. Walsh played softball in high school and college; she also played in Chicago before moving to Las Vegas in 2023.

Patricia Zimmerman, 79, also has a lot of softball experience.

"I played competitive softball in Wisconsin, too. Played in nationals. I've played in the Huntsman (World Senior) Games now for 26 years," she said.

Lori Gonzalez tags out a member of the Red Hawks during an Oct. 1 game at Pinnacle Park. On this month's SCS LIFE cover, Lena Ramirez squares up a pitch in the loss to the Red Hawks.

While the team leaders all had a softball background, some team members had to adjust to being in a more competitive situation in a sport they either hadn't played in years or at all.

Annie Tucker, 69, played in a city league in Colorado Springs. "I was an adult, and it was just for fun," she said.

"This is just so different -- playing really competitively and being more aware of the rules. It's a lot of good coaching, and a lot of positive comments," Tucker said.

Tracey Gray recently moved to Sun City Summerlin and had never played softball before she started playing for fun with the women on Saturday. Now she's one of the Diamond Girls, catching balls in left field.

"She's a tennis player trying to play softball for the first time. She's got heart, yeah? And, you know, she's perfect for this league," said Esau Ramirez

Up in the stands on this game day, was Betty McCauley, 85, who was one of three women who were instrumental in starting the Saturday women's softball group. She said back then it was hard to keep enough women for a team.

Although she no longer plays, she's always there to support the women.

"I can't play anymore," she said. "I got bad knees. I holler, and I keep the paperwork for the team."

While the season is long, the Diamond Girls have proven they can not only compete in the National League, but win. One opposing coach giving a scouting report said they have infielders who can really throw the ball and runners who can take extra bases, making them a difficult team to contend with.

Many of those skills were honed on Saturdays when the women had two hours reserved on the new artificial turf field every week. They continue to practice then and Youmans, the club treasurer, has clinics for any women _ or men _ who want to learn the nuances of the game.

"We still come out on Saturday," Lena Ramirez said. "It's an open group. Anybody can come. It's a good way for women that are interested to come and check us out, practice with us and see how they feel about joining the team."

The 1992 movie about women playing fast-pitch baseball during World War II and after was called "A League of Their Own."

In Sun City Summerlin, the Diamond Girls are "A Team of Their Own."

15 Years Ago: Son still seeking justice in first Sun City Summerlin slaying

15 YEARS AGO

• The son of a man killed in 1994 in Sun City Summerlin's first murder is still waiting for final justice in the case. Bruce Bauer said he had to undergo counseling and lost 35 pounds during the trial of Donald Sherman, who was convicted of murder and sentenced to death in 1997 in the slaying of his father, Dr. Lester Bauer. The younger Bauer said he thinks daily of his father and wonders why Nevada has a death penalty when Sherman is still alive on death row. A jury took only four hours to convict Sherman, who had broken up with the victim's daughter before beating Lester Bauer to death with a hammer while he slept in a crime that shook the 55-plus community.

• Sun City Director of Golf Joe Kelly was inducted into the Southern Nevada Golf Hall of Fame for his work in the community. The 59-year-old Kelly began working in Las Vegas golf in 1978 at the Desert Inn Country Club and worked at several other courses before taking the job managing Sun City's three golf courses.

• Las Vegas Fire Chief Greg Gammon assured Sun City residents their new fire station is on schedule despite the city's current economic problems. Gammon said a groundbreaking would be held in the winter and the new station will take about a year to build. It is expected to cost $4.6 million, or about $800,000 below earlier estimates. The new station will cut three to four minutes off the average response time for rescue vehicles in Sun City.

• Tickets are on sale for the 1996 Ms. Senior Clark County pageant, which will be held in Sun City Summerlin. Tickets are $10 for the Nov. 18 show, which will crown the county's entry into the state pageant.

• Golf course homesites are now being sold for Sun City's third golf course. Del Webb is also advertising lots on the Highland Falls course as well as Eagle Crest, the new executive length course. Homes begin at $119,900 in Sun City, not including premiums for golf course lots.

• A 2-bedroom home with golf course views was being listed at $197,500.

25 YEARS AGO

• Sun City's woodworkers are trying to make Christmas a happier time of year for children stricken by cancer. The Sawdusters club donated more than 100 hand-crafted toys to the Candlelighters for Child Cancer foundation. The club chooses a charity each year to donate its toys to.

• A Methodist Church

that started in Sun City is moving into a new building across from Palo Verde High School. The Desert Springs Methodist Church outgrew its Sun City roots and has about 425 members as it occupies the new building.

• A 3-bedroom golf course home with what was described as spectacular views was listed for sale at $485,000.

20 YEARS AGO

• Sun City residents were baffled by a light show that played out along the cliffs west of Summerlin. The lights were at first thought to be a rocket launching from Southern California but police using a helicopter found the real answer when they stopped a group of people with generators and floodlights in the desert. The man behind the magic turned out to be Tony Milici, a Las Vegas artist known for his works of public art who was promoting an upcoming show on the strip. BLM officials said they may press charges because the generators were not authorized and could have sparked fires.

• A home at 2008 Hot Oak Ridge with golf course and Strip views was listed for sale at $975,000

10 YEARS AGO

• Presidential candidate Marco Rubio, a senator from Florida, drew an enthusiastic crowd of some 500 people at a campaign rally in Sun City. Rubio won applause on several occasions from the audience at Mountain Shadows Community Center, particularly when he said new blood was needed among the political class.

• The Sun City Security Patrol will be offering rides in its Prius patrol cars during a Picnic With the Patrol open house this month. Information about safety, security and volunteering will be available during the picnic, which will be held behind the outdoor pool adjacent to Security Patrol offices at the Desert Vista picnic area.

5 YEARS AGO

• With landscaping employees hard to find, Sun City is raising the starting wage of $13 an hour for the workers. The Board of Directors agreed to raise the rate after hearing that the landscaping department is down 11 workers. The new rate will be $14-16 an hour depending on qualifications and experience.

• A proposal to allow children and grandchildren of property owners to use pools and other facilities was approved after a series of contested votes. The disputes led board member Leo Crawford to say they are proof that not everything is decided in advance of board meetings.

3 YEARS AGO

Planning is beginning for a new basketball court in Sun City. The current court is actually part of a tennis court and only used during specific hours when tennis is not being played.

• Employees will not have to attend the annual Employee Recognition luncheon to get their bonus checks of $100. The decision came after several employees said they were not comfortable attending large gatherings. Sun City is spending about $33,000 to give full-time employees $100 and part-time workers $50.

• Executive Director Mitzi Mills was recognized for having completed five years in her position.

1 YEAR AGO

• The Board of Directors voted not to go ahead with replacement of the infield turf at the Pinnacle softball field after the softball club said it wasn't needed. The $162,500 budgeted for the new turf will now be used in 2031. The reserve budget called for a new field this year to replace the 8-year-old field, but was told by the softball club president that it was not necessary.

• The latest overseeding at Sun City's three golf courses was labeled a success, and board members said the three-week closure of the courses was worthwhile.

This geriatrics training program escaped the ax. For now.

By Paula Span
KFF Health News

In St. Louis, a team of students aboard a well-equipped van visits senior centers, a nursing home, a church, and other sites, learning to conduct comprehensive, hourlong geriatric assessments.

The team — future doctors, social workers, psychologists, and therapists — looks for such common problems as frailty, muscle weakness, and cognitive decline. The patients they evaluate, free of charge, receive printed plans to help guide their care.

Across Oregon, community health workers have enrolled in an eight-hour online training program — with sections on Medicare and Medicaid, hospice and palliative care, and communication with patients and families — to help them work with older adults.

“We need these front-line public health workers to know how to provide age-friendly care,” said Laura Byerly, the geriatrician at the Oregon Health & Science University who leads its efforts.

And in Louisville, the same federally funded program provides geriatrics training across Kentucky. Sometimes, though, it takes a less formal approach.

Sam Cotton, the social worker who directs its dementia program, recently heard from a local Methodist church whose parishioners were caring for relatives with dementia. Could someone talk to the congregation about this demanding role? Cotton, an assistant professor at the University of Louisville, said sure, she would be there.

These programs, and 39 more like them across the country, aim to address an alarming fact: The number of geriatricians and other health care providers knowledgeable about aging has failed to keep up with the burgeoning population age 65 and older.

Since 2015, therefore, Congress has authorized funding for the Geriatrics Workforce Enhancement Program, or GWEP, which trains about 70,000 people a year.

Recently, these grants to universities and hospitals, up to $1 million each this year, appeared imperiled. In July, without warning or explanation, the annual disbursements to the recipients, some of which had participated since the program began in 2015, were substantially reduced.

Instead of an expected $41.8 million, the grantees collectively received $27.5 million, a 34% shortfall, according to the Eldercare Workforce Alliance. And more cuts appeared to be coming.

The Trump administration’s proposed budget for fiscal 2026 eliminated GWEP, along with many other programs funded through the Health Resources and Services Administration, an agency of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Although the program had always drawn bipartisan support, and had been repeatedly authorized for five years, the president’s budget zeroed it out, citing “an effort to streamline the bureaucracy, reset the proper balance between federal and state responsibilities, and save taxpayer funds.”

As 10 weeks passed without clarification — was the missing money merely delayed or gone for good? — program directors frantically called

YOUR HEALTH

Is America ready for the changes to 2026 Medicare Part D plans?

Toni:

Currently, I am on a stand-alone Part D plan with a Medicare Supplement because of my serious health issues. Last week, I received information about the changes to the 2026 Medicare Part D plan I am currently enrolled in, and the premium is increasing by $50 per month, from $44.80 to $94.80 beginning January 1. The Part D plan also informed me that two of my expensive prescriptions for my heart and rheumatoid arthritis issue will no longer be covered on this specific plan beginning January 2026.

Toni, please explain in easy-to-understand terms what I need to do to change to a Part D plan that will cover all of my prescriptions before Medicare's Open Enrollment Period ends on December 7. I have read your articles for years, and now I need your Medicare guidance.

—Tammy from Cypress, Texas

Tammy:

The 2026 Part D plans became available to the public at www.medicare.gov on Wednesday, October 1, and there are serious changes, with Part D premiums increasing. Medicare.gov is where you can find which Medicare Part D plan is affordable and covers your current prescription drugs.

The good news is that Medicare negotiated directly with manufacturers for the price of certain expensive brand-name Part D drugs, and the price change will be effective January 1 for Eliquis, Xarelto, Januvia, Jardiance, Farxiga, Entresto, Enbrel, Imbruvica, Stelara, and NovoLog/Fiasp (insulin aspart).

For 2026, Medicare Part D will have three main stages: deductible, initial coverage and catastrophic coverage. Costs and maximum out-of-pocket are as follows:

TONI KING

—Initial deductible is $615.

—Six drug tiers of initial coverage: Drug Tier 1: Preferred Generic Drugs; Drug Tier 2: Generic Drugs; Drug Tier 3: Preferred Brand Drugs; Drug Tier 4: Non-Preferred Drugs; Drug Tier 5: Specialty Drugs and, beginning January 1, 2026, Drug Tier 6: Select Care Drugs begins for the first time.

—Initial coverage stage: During the initial coverage period with the six drug tiers, the Part D plan pays its share of the cost of your drugs, and you pay your share of the cost until the maximum amount of $2,100 out-of-pocket is met. Then you move to the catastrophic coverage stage.

—Catastrophic coverage: There is a $0 out of pocket when a Medicare beneficiary enters the catastrophic coverage stage. Medicare will pick up all costs of the prescriptions, whether brand name or generic, with a stand-alone Medicare Part D plan or a Medicare Advantage with a Part D plan included, and you will pay $0.

—On January 1 of each year, the process starts all over again with a new Medicare Prescription Drug plan and new initial deductible and maximum initial coverage limit that leads you to the catastrophic coverage stage.

Need a new hobby? Don't choose these!

Who doesn't like a hobby? Engaging in hobbies is a way to relax, develop new skills, connect with others who share the same interests, and bore the heck out of your friends. My best friend collects sea shells, which to me are as fascinating as a box of drill bits. Each time he gets a new one, though, he demands we all come over and see it. I go, but most of them look like what octopuses emit from their posteriors.

My main hobby is board games, for which I thank my father. Each month he would bring home the latest Parker Brothers or Milton Bradley game. We enjoyed Clue, the Game of Life, Careers, and all the other family-friendly games. But the day he brought in Risk and Monopoly, "friendly" went out the window. Mom, who was normally meek and soft-spoken, suddenly mutated into the Wicked Witch of the West who gleefully annihilated (Risk) or bankrupted (Monopoly) EACH ONE OF HER THREE ANGELIC CHILDREN SHE GAVE BIRTH TO! I once tape-recorded a full game of us going at it. ("Wait...what? You just gave Boardwalk to Dad for a "Get Out of Jail" card? ARE YOU OUT OF YOUR [expletive] MIND?") If I'd filmed it, I'm convinced we would have won the Oscar for Best Live Action Short Film.

My other hobbies are:

Cruising the Fremont Street Experience. I like to people-watch, and this is where they all congregate. I dig the street performers, boogie at the three concert stages, and count the number of people with tattoos. There are a lot, so I use a calculator.

Playing Tennis. I love the game because it's healthy, lots of fun, and you hear things like "Do you prefer grass or hardcourt?" "I don't know. I've never smoked hardcourt." And good advice like "No matter how good you get, you'll never be as good as a wall," "Never marry a tennis player because love means nothing to them," and "Don't be a deuce bag" after you hit a winner.

Getting In Trouble Abroad. No one wants this to happen. Except me. I'm a travel writer, so getting in deep water often makes a good story. Years ago, I won a free trip to the Big Island of Hawaii. I was there just to relax with no intention of writing a travel piece—until a golf partner made an offhand remark that changed my mind. The main hazards on the course are rocklike lava formations that can swallow your ball. The lava is the domain of Madame Pele, the island's fiery goddess of volcanoes and fire. "If she likes you, she'll kick your ball back onto the fairway," he said. "If she doesn't, she'll keep it." What bunk. But just to be safe, I bought an extra box of golf balls. On the first tee, I joked that I hoped the goddess's relative, the Brazilian soccer star Pele, was doing well in retirement. Hey, she had a sense of humor or she didn't. By the time I finally staggered off the first green, I had sextuple bogeyed and had only one golf ball left. Madame Pele did not have a sense of humor. But a sports-and-fitness website did and bought it. Lesson to Madame: Never tee off a writer.

ment Plan is a payment option which began January 1, 2025, to help manage your out-of-pocket drug costs by spreading your monthly prescription drug costs throughout the year from January to December. For more information about the payment plan, visit www.medicare.gov or call your Medicare Part D plan.

Toni Says tips to help you find a Part D plan:

1. Visit www.medicare.gov to view 2026 Medicare stand-alone Part D and Medicare Advantage with Part D plans attached. The website has a tool for helping you narrow your search for a new Medicare Prescription Drug plan.

2. Talk to your primary care and specialty doctors about which brand-name drugs can be changed to generics.

3. Get samples from your doctor to help control costs.

4. Search various prescription drug programs such as GoodRx, Single Care or Amazon for less expensive prescription drug costs. Wal-Mart, Kroger, HEB and Costco also have discount prescription drug plans.

Readers, your prescription drug needs can change with each yearly Medicare Open Enrollment Period. Review your options carefully, because with Medicare, what you don't know WILL hurt you!

SAVVY SENIOR

What seniors need to know about this fall's vaccines

Dear Savvy Senior,

With a longtime vaccine critic leading the nation's health departments, can you give me updated information on which vaccines are recommended for Medicare seniors this fall?

Medicare Mary

Dear Mary,

Even though the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is undergoing major cultural changes and upheaval, the overall fall vaccine recommendations for "older adults" resembles last year, with exception of the Covid shot. Here's what you should know.

FLU SHOTS FOR SENIORS

Just as they normally do, the CDC recommends a seasonal flu shot to everyone 6 months of age and older, but it's especially important for older adults who have weaker immune defenses and have a greater risk of developing dangerous flu complications compared with younger, healthy adults.

For people age 65 and older, there are three different FDA approved flu vaccines (you only need one) that are recommended over traditional flu shots. These include: the Fluzone High-Dose Quadrivalent, Flublok Quadrivalent (recombinant, egg free vaccine), and Flud Quadrivalent.

JIM MILLER

These vaccines are formulated to create a more robust immune response, helping the body produce more antibodies, which makes them more effective in preventing the flu.

All flu vaccines are covered 100 percent by Medicare Part B as long as your doctor, health clinic or pharmacy agrees not to charge you more than Medicare pays.

RSV SHOTS

In addition to the flu shot, the CDC also recommends a single-dose of RSV (respiratory syncytial virus) vaccine for all adults age 75 and older, as well as to high-risk adults between ages 50 and 74. These are people who have chronic heart or lung disease, weakened immune systems, diabetes with complications, severe obesity, or who live in long-term care facilities.

RSV is responsible for 6,000 to 10,000 deaths and up to 150,000 hospitalizations each year.

The three RSV vaccines approved and available in the U.S. – Arexvy, Abrysvo and mResvia – are all covered under Medicare (Part D) prescription drug plans. But note that if you got an RSV shot last year, or when it first became available in 2023, you do not need to get a second dose this year. For now, only one dose of RSV vaccine is recommended.

COVID BOOSTER

If you haven't had a Covid booster shot lately, the Food and Drug Administration recently approved the 2025-2026 Covid-19 vaccine, which has been updated to target the dominant strain.

This vaccine has been recommended for all adults 65 and older and younger people that have a health condition that makes them vulnerable to severe Covid. But the new, CDC Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices just announced that they are no longer recommending Covid shots. Instead, they are recommending 65 and older adults and immunocompromised younger people should decide individually or with a doctor.

Covid causes at least 40,000 hospitalizations and approximately 47,000 deaths in the U.S. each year. Covid shots are covered by Medicare Part B.

PNEUMONIA VACCINES

If you haven't been vaccinated for pneumonia, you should also consider getting the pneumococcal vaccine this fall. These vaccines are now recommended by the CDC to adults age 50 and older, instead of age 65, which was the previous recommendation.

Pneumonia causes a whopping 1.2 million people to visit medical emergency departments in the U.S. each year and causes roughly 50,000 deaths.

If you've never been vaccinated for pneumonia, the PCV20 (Prevnar 20) or PCV21 (Capvaxive) are the top choices because they cover the most common serotypes.

Medicare Part B covers pneumococcal shots, and you only need to get it once.

SIDE-EFFECTS AND SAFETY

You should be aware that all these vaccines can cause mild side effects like pain or tenderness where you got the shot, muscle aches, headache, fever or fatigue.

Also note that it's safe to receive these vaccines at the same time, but it may be best to spread them out a week or two because multiple vaccinations on the same day may cause increased side-effects.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

BOARD ELECTION

Four of the nine seats on Sun City's Board of Directors will be up for grabs in the upcoming election.

Potential candidates must sign up to run by Nov. 26 for one of the four at large seats, which will be filled by the top vote getters when ballots are tallied next February.

Three incumbent seats currently held by Jeff Rorick, Judy Williams and Ellen Bachman will be contested for three-year terms, while a fourth seat held by Lee Fair will be a two-year term. Fair is an interim board member, appointed after Joe O'Connell resigned his spot just months after being elected.

Elections Chair Leo Crawford encouraged any Sun City resident who wants to serve to run. Candidates must fill out a disclosure form stating they have no conflicts of interest to serve.

MARIJUANA SMOKING

Sun City Summerlin isn't going to get into the marijuana enforcement business.

A complaint about someone smoking marijuana in the back yard of a golf course home led to some discussion at the Legal Review Committee on whether SCSCAI should try to implement and enforce marijuana rules.

In the end it was decided that there is little the SCSCAI can or should do other than follow city and state law and allow outside authorities to enforce it as much, or as little, as they can.

Marijuana is legal in Las Vegas but smoking it in public places is not.

their congressional representatives while contemplating painful layoffs and an uncertain future.

"This money was appropriated, signed, and sealed, so where is it?" Cotton said last month. Besides her role in the Louisville program, she serves as board president of the National Association of Geriatric Education Centers.

Grantees' questions to HRSA, the funding agency, brought few answers. Then, on Sept. 10, the programs discovered that, as mysteriously as they had vanished, the rest of the allocated funds had suddenly materialized.

And GWEP has been restored to both the House and Senate bills funding the federal health department, though the bills could still change or be voted down — or a continuing resolution could freeze current funding.

The rescue may reflect, in part, the efforts of a powerful GWEP supporter, Republican Sen. Susan Collins of Maine, who faces reelection next year.

In a Senate floor speech on Sept. 3, Collins called the program a "modest investment that will help ensure that our older Americans have the expert care that they need, that their caregivers are provided with training, that other support employees and health care providers receive the skills that they need."

Still, "it has been a roller coaster, to say the least," said Marla Berg-Weger, GWEP co-director at Saint Louis University, which trains about 9,800 people annually.

The payments withheld for 10 weeks equaled the amount that each grant had earmarked for Alzheimer's and dementia training, program directors found. The programs were required to designate $230,000 of a $1 million grant to dementia training for both professionals and community members, but some had chosen to spend more and therefore had larger shortfalls.

The GWEP at Louisiana State University, for instance, initially received just $152,000 of its expected $976,659 and halted (temporarily, the director hopes) all its geriatric rotations and internships in Louisiana and Mississippi.

What has been going on? HRSA, the federal agency funding the programs, said in an email that "all grant programs have been thoroughly reviewed to ensure alignment with administration priorities," causing "brief delays in executing certain payments."

"It's surprising to me that anyone would question the value of having a workforce knowledgeable about care for older adults," said Carole Johnson, the agency's administrator during the Biden administration.

"Everybody in the field hoped this program would grow, not wither," she added.

Appropriations have increased only slightly in recent years. Yet "the recipients are very resourceful," Johnson added. "It's a 'big bang for the buck' program and a smart use of federal resources."

The number of practicing geriatricians — 6,580 this year, according to HRSA estimates — is likely to decrease slightly in the coming years, even as the need for such expertise climbs. It's hard to attract medical students and doctors to a relatively low-paying specialty whose patients are mostly insured by Medicare, though surveys have shown high job satisfaction among geriatricians.

Most older patients receive care not from geriatricians but from primary care doctors, other medical specialists, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, social workers, pharmacists, and direct care workers.

Accordingly, GWEPs emphasize extending knowledge about care for elders — whose risks, symptoms, goals, and treatments often differ from those of younger patients — to a wide array of providers, especially in rural and underserved areas. They also educate patients themselves and family caregivers.
